

● S+ACADEMY WORLD TALKS '23

How architecture can act for ourselves, each other, our cities, and the environment

Alejandro
Aravena

Synopsis

The S+Academy World Talks invite internationally recognized personalities to share their experience and vision for the development of more sustainable cities and more prosperous communities. Considering the difficulties of access to housing that we see today, this Talk will address the role of architecture and urban planning in the development of solutions with social and environmental reach. The guest speaker is the acclaimed Pritzker Prize-winning architect Alejandro Aravena, globally recognized for his sustainable design of contemporary architecture and his socially conscious building projects that aim to reduce economic inequality in urban areas.

"With 3 billion people living in cities, and a third of them living below the poverty line, it is urgent to invest in well-designed affordable housing."
